Handwritten marginal notes in a smaller script, likely a commentary or a different dialect, running vertically along the left edge of the page.

Handwritten text in a historical script, likely Burmese, arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines. The text is densely packed and appears to be a formal document or a literary work. The script is a cursive style with many ligatures and specific character forms characteristic of older Burmese writing. There are some larger characters interspersed, possibly indicating the start of new sections or specific titles. The ink is dark, and the paper shows signs of age and wear.

[The following text is highly degraded and mostly illegible due to extreme blurring and noise.]

[illegible]

Handwritten text in a historical script, likely Burmese, with red ink used for headings or emphasis. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The script is dense and cursive, characteristic of traditional Southeast Asian manuscripts. The red ink highlights specific words or phrases, possibly indicating a title, a section header, or a list of items. The overall appearance is that of an old, weathered document.

[The text in this block is extremely faint and largely illegible due to fading and bleed-through from the reverse side. It appears to be a continuation of the Sanskrit text found in the other blocks.]
